

Introduction to methods of determining, analyzing, and modeling of mechatronics systems using software packages such as Matlab and Simulink, systematically analyze, design, and tune linear control systems, tune the controller parameters using automated and interactive techniques, and verify performance, design of single- and multi- loop control systems using a variety of classical and state space techniques.